ROYALTY IN THE CITY.

Descendant of the Great Napoleon Passes Through From the West.

On Saturday last a distinguished party of Frenchmen passed through the city from the west, on their way to the World's Fair. The party consisted of Prince Roland Bonaparte, a descendant of the great Napoleon and his suite, consisting of six persons: Capt. Henri de Peirefen, formerly a naval officer, A. D. C. Dr. Paul Topinard, a celebrated physician, Paris; D. Bonnard, of the Paris Journal, La France, and L'Evenement; M. L'Andri, editor of L. Discours; M. Edouard de Virgite, the Prince's private Secretary; and Charles Clement, body servant.

The Prince is a tall, stoutly built gentleman, standing over 6 feet, a contrast to his famous ancestor. He dislikes publicity and is traveling as quietly and unobtrusively as possible. He is also a writer of some repute.

The party will visit Winnipeg, staying for a few days, when they will proceed on their journey to Chicago. After taking in the fair, the party intend paying Montreal a visit, when they will sail for Europe. It is the intention of the Prince to return to this continent in the winter, raising the Southern States and Mexico.

OXBOW.

The town of Oxbow is situated on the Souris branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway, about 45 miles east of Estevan, and occupies a beautiful site, standing as it does on a gentle slope of prairie land, facing south-west, which affords excellent drainage into the Souris river, which flows past the town on the south side, and which a short distance to the west, forms that peculiar curve from which the town derives its name.

This town is less than 18 months old; and, in the manner in which it has grown since starting is to be taken as an indication of future prosperity, the town of Oxbow will have a bright future, and will shortly be ranked among the most important towns in the North-west.

We presume one of the principal reasons for the rapid development of this town and surrounding country is the fact that the soil is admirably adapted to the growing of wheat, spring usually being considerably earlier than throughout Manitoba, and an almost total immunity from early frosts in the fall. It will readily be seen, therefore, that no better section of country could be offered to intending settlers than this of which we write, and there are large tracts of land yet open for settlement.

There has already been a considerable immigration to this locality this spring. 13 cars of settlers' effects having arrived at the depot here, and it is estimated that there will be fully 50 per cent more acreage under cultivation, this year than last.

Your reporter was informed that a Mr. Garnet, of St. Thomas, N.D., who carries on farming on a large scale in that country, has been here since March, and has stated that the sample of grain grown here is much superior to that grown in his own country to the south, being heavier, while the yield per acre was about the same in both places last year. Mr. Garnet owns 2,800 acres of land in the Oxbow district, and says that during the coming season he intends to bring in 20 carloads of horses and ploughs and other necessary implements and begin breaking up this land.

There is an Agricultural Society here, with a large membership. They hold their exhibitions at Alameda and this town alternately. This society is in a flourishing condition, which is an indication of prosperity among the farmers.

The Episcopalians, Methodists and Presbyterians have churches here and hold meetings regularly. There is also a good school with an average attendance of forty children.

This town has every facility for marketing all kinds of farm produce, and in it is represented almost every kind of business, among which we mention:

The Farmers' Joint Stock Grist Mill Company. The existence of this company is due to the enterprise and foresight of Mr. A. A. McLaughlin, the present managing director and secretary, whose call to the farmers was promptly responded to with the result that a company was formed bearing the name which is now nearly completed, is a heavily framed building 42x32, three stories high, independent of garret or basement; also, engine house, 22x32, the whole being built on a solid stone foundation nine feet high, and entirely covered with steel shingles and siding.

On the first, a graining floor, there are five double stands of rolls; also the flour pucker and chop stones. On the second floor, there are three purifiers and three rollers; also smutter and brush machines.

On the 3rd floor there are three scalpers and five floor bolts, one bran duster and also the wheat cleaner and separator.

The basement is mostly taken up with elevator boots, line shafting, and three storage bins, etc. The engine is a Corliss, 65 horse power, built by John Abell, of Toronto. Your reporter is informed that the machinery throughout is the very best that can be procured in America.

Mr. A. R. Leitch has charge of the work of construction, and deserves credit for the excellent manner in which he has done his work.

The hardware business is represented by Mr. A. W. Roalston, on Railroad avenue opposite the depot, and Mr. J. Young, Main street. Mr. Roalston came here from Brandon, where he was connected with the Wells Hardware Co., and has succeeded in building up a good trade. He has one of the finest hardware stores west of Brandon, and deals in all kinds of building and shelf hardware, cutlery, plated ware, tins and stoves.

Mr. J. Young, carries on a general hardware business: Shelf and heavy goods, stoves and tinware, lamps, paints and oils. This firm was formerly Young Bros, but since last December the present proprietor has carried it on alone, with Mr. J. Young as manager.

The Messy-Harris company have here about as fine a warehouse as is to be found in any western town, and with Mr. S. Sprague as manager the company should do a good business.

The Livery and sale business is carried on by Messrs. Polard & Bell, Railroad ave., and Messrs. Morrison & Gillespie, Main street, and Andrew Jackson, Main street. At any of these places good horses and comfortable carriages are kept for hire.

Our World's Fair Letter.

CHICAGO, April 30, 1893

Only one more day and then the fair will be a thing of the present. Although the daily visitors will see but little difference next Monday from the appearance of the grounds, as they are in fine condition, still the fair will seem different. It will be on the stage of action, and the thousands of visitors, next Monday are not going to be disappointed in the greatest show on earth. Every effort has been made by the anxious officials to have the fair open in good shape; but the continued storms and incessant rains have hindered the work very much. The finishing touches are being put upon the white gown of the wonderful "city by the Lake," but they will be ready to throw wide open the gates, and invite critical inspection from their many guests next Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Chicago is proud of the fair and on a whole has done her duty in preparing to receive and entertain and care for the visiting multitude. She has placed them in first class sanitary condition. She has organized an efficient system of fire, police and hospital service at the exposition grounds, and she has done all and even more than she promised to do when the location of the fair was settled.

There is one thing, however, that Chicago will stand on her rights for, and that is the prices charged for hotel and restaurant accommodations. It is useless for the people say back in the country to think they can come to Chicago, see the fair and stop at the best hotel while doing so for the same money that they pay for hotel rates at home. Chicago is a big city and the rates are always higher in the city than in small country villages; for about $2.00 per day, and he can buy a good meal at any restaurant for fifty cents, but if he comes here expecting to live on $5.00 per week and take in a big show out of that, he will be much mistaken.

In short, it will cost money to see the fair, and it will be money well spent, too.

A historic relic reached the city yesterday, and is now in the custody of one of the safety deposit companies. It is the sword of Washington. It is a bayonet fixed, full dress sword, with parchment sheathed and silk tie and cord attached. It was manufactured in 1790. It is not yet determined just what disposition will be made of the sword during the fair, but it will probably be on exhibition in the Government Building.

The Pennsylvania's World's Fair headquarters will be in good shape Monday morning. The carpets are all laid and the rich furniture is being put in today. The pictures are all hung and the decoration is finished. The building is a substantial building and resembles somewhat the Independence Hall in Philadelphia. In the centre of the structure is a great rotunda running up through the building, and far up into the clock where it ends in a dome, richly frescoed and brilliantly lighted by electric lamps sunk in the ceiling. It is under the dome that the famous Liberty Bell will be placed. The women's department is artistically designed and is furnished for a reception room. A cloth of gold carpet made on special order in Paris, covers the triangular-shaped room. Some very fine pictures painted by Pennsylvania women adorn the walls. The Keystone State has responded bountifully in the way of exhibits in the main building. Eight thousand square feet are occupied in the Horticultural building. This is fitted up handsomely and is intended to have a very fine display of pomology and viticulture. Pennsylvania is famous the world over for its coal, and coal will be king in its exhibit. Great Pyramids of selected pieces with solid chunks are placed around, and in the centre is a large model of the well known coal breaker and mining appliances, showing just how the work is accomplished in the great anthracite region.

The sun shines with a bright glory today, giving a bright warm welcome to the many visitors that are in our city. Two o'clock is the hour set for removing the Liberty Bell to Jackson Park. This will be a fine parade. The Chicago guards will escort the party to the grounds. They are rushing things in every building. A visitor can hardly hear himself think for the noise of the hammers, the rolling of trucks and wrenching apart of box tops. The odor of paint and varnish fill the air, as every workman puts the finishing touches to every nook and crevice. The fair will close to-night with a thankful sigh that everything is in good shape as it is.

NOTES.

The dedication of the Turkish mosque at the Turkish village on Midway Place—yesterday afternoon attracted more than 4,000 people, many of whom stood in rain and water without being regarded a glimpse of the chief actors in the ceremony.

California is way behind with both building and exhibits, but they are working day and night, and it is expected that the work will not take over a week longer to finish.

Mrs. Potter Palmer gives a reception in the large cyclorama at Jackson Park to-day. This will be a rare treat to a great many ladies, and it is to be hoped the sun will continue to shine throughout the day.

AN OLD DUMB BELL.

A cracked bell is not, generally speaking, an object of much interest. We have heard the poet and the orator display some magnificent ideas that got their inspiration from the ringing and the chiming of the golden notes of the bells; but it is left for American patriotism to enshrine a great people by the sight of an old dumb bell. In Philadelphia there is an old cracked bell that is called "Liberty bell," from the fact that it was rung for the signing of the American Declaration of Independence in 1776. As might have been expected in a people whose ardent patriotism, is one of the prominent characteristics of our southern neighbors. Old liberty bell must do duty at Chicago this summer, and so an escort of forty of Philadelphia's best men have been detailed to convey the sacred relic to the great show. On its passage through the towns on the route, regiments of soldiers, foot cavalry and artillery were called out to salute the "old dumb bell," and the best orators of the nation had to respond to the salutes of the rifle and artillery.

The bell and the flag that has braved 100 years, furnished the said orators with breathing thoughts, and burning words that thrilled the multitude. School children were out in procession and each furnished with a miniature flag, to wave in the breeze, while their little throats were vocal, with the hurrah. We cold blooded Canadians can hardly make out what all the fuss was about; but if we were to sit down and ponder while, we might possibly arrive at the conclusion, that such processions and such a training for children are the very best schools for graduating patriots. The boys that have received such an early training are never heard to make a sneering remark about the flag of their country. They are never heard discussing the question, whether it is the best thing that they can do to change the old flag, or haul it down and run up a foreign one in its pole. They never bother themselves discussing the question whether 100 or 1000 years is the probable age of a national banner. Ex-president Harrison says, that the present generation of Americans, think more of a star flag than any previous generation, and that the generations to come will be still more loyal to it than the present. All honor to such loyalty, say we, and let Canadians that have a flag that has a record and a volume of bright traditions cling to their national banner, and when any fellow is heard prating about a change, let him be marked for a midnight funeral, at which the oxen may host a fitting dirge. Why don't Canadians have more holidays, which the pomp and circumstance of grand processions might inspire our orators with enthusiastic speeches, and in this way wipe out the few restless nincompoops who dare to utter a sneer, or hint at the possibility of Canadians ever thinking of abandoning the union jack.

PROMPT

WHEN AUTUMN MEETS WINTER.

When Autumn meets Winter her eyes are dim. And a cold, clammy hand she extends to him. He knows that she is cold, and he is vain; All he is glad to cause her pain.

Bright, beautiful Autumn! Her fair cheeks pale. And she weeps as she thinks of a certain deep vale. Where asters are blooming, where tall dahlias nod. Where dwells her last daughter, the sweet golden-roed.

When Autumn meets Winter her lips are compressed. She has given him much—shall she give him the rest? And she comes with pity upon the grand trees. Oh! must she surrender such vows as these?

Then Winter advances and vainly he tries Not to see the big tears in sweet Autumn's eyes. But, try as he will, her passionate man brings with a rash and sudden blow.

"Autumn, cease weeping! 'Tis foolish, un-just. Why not surrender at once, if you must? Then, with laughter and song, and a covering she covers her face. And rushes headlong to Winter's embrace. And he, proud, triumphant, dries his own Whistles a tune in Autumn's dull ears; Washes her face with the crystal snow. And down the aisles of the Past they go.

POOR LITTLE THING!

The barn looked beautiful. It was hung with festal greens and decked with gay lanterns till it looked like a real ballroom.

"They'll burn the place down before they are done," grumbled Father Craig, who had just had a fall on the waxed floor, and felt a little out of humor.

"John has plenty of buckets," Mother Craig replied, gently. "Don't think there's a better one in and rub some lightning liniment on this leg, father."

"I am going to stay right here," he said, rubbing his shins. "I'm going to keep an eye on those candles, Mary. Where's Jessie?"

"There she is," said mother, pointing to a shy little figure in a black dress tucked away in one corner. "Poor little thing! She would wear her mourning clothes, and she does look so plain!"

"Well, she ain't much for looks, that's so," said Father Craig, glancing from the little orphan girl who had come to "help" on the farm to his own daughter Kitty, in her ruffled pink lawn, gay with lace and ribbons, that fluttered about her as she moved.

The violin and the harp began the spirited music of a Virginia reel, and pretty Kitty Craig opened the ball with Robin Shaw, the handsome man in Liddellton.

"Who is that little girl in the corner?" Robin asked, as he brought Kitty triumphantly down the length of the floor to the tune of "Bonnie Wee Laddie."

"That's said Kitty, a trifle scornfully. 'That's a girl mother took out of a home in town. She helps with the churning.'"

"Poor little thing!" said Robin, tenderly. "How sad she looks!"

"What did you think of the picnic, Robin?" said Kitty, tossing back her curls with a flirt of her head. "Fine, wasn't it? But I wouldn't be in Betty Harding's boots for a good deal. Tom Harding says that last year she brought a red coat to the bucking in her pocket."

It was Robin's turn now, and he did not reply. Down the barn floor he went again, his handsome face aglow, his feet in perfect time with "Bonnie Wee Laddie," running the gamut of thirty pairs of bright eyes.

Jessie, in the corner, looked at him. She had never seen such a handsome man before—so strong, so rudely and full of health. Was Kitty Craig going to marry him? she wondered. A woman must be happy to have such a good, strong man always at her side to protect and love her.

"Poor little thing!" she said, unconsciously, thinking of herself. "That is what they all say. I suppose I ought to be thankful for my pity. I am not! I am afraid I am a wicked girl, but I can't help it. I can't help it!"

Tears came to her eyes, and she felt them ready to fall. A wild desire to get away came over her, and she slipped out of the door into the quiet moonlight alone.

Under the shadow of the old cypress trees she threw herself down in the long, dewy grass, and her grief and her loneliness found vent in hot, passionate tears.

"Why do I live?" she sobbed. "No one cares for me, no one wants me. If I was only pretty like Kitty Craig, many a body would love me a little. I try to be good, but it does not make any difference. I am only a poor little thing. I wish I was dead—I wish I was dead!"

The harp and violin were playing the "Bonnie Redbreast Schottische" now. Jessie could hear the movements of the dancers feet, the rattles of laughter, the gay salutes and replies, but she could not hear a soft footfall on the grass beside her.

"Why, you poor little thing!" said a tender, manly voice beside her. "What is the matter?"

"Don't call me that!" said Jessie, passionately, springing to her feet. "I am not a poor little thing! I won't have you say that I am!"

"Forgive me," said Robin Shaw, kindly. "I did not mean to hurt you. I thought you were ill, or—or—I want to ask you to dance with me. I saw you come out, and I came to hunt you."

Jessie was overwhelmed.

"Dance with me!" she repeated, in a dazed way.

"Will you?" said Robin, holding out his hand. "Come! Something has hurt you. Let us take a walk down to the bridge, and when you feel better, we can go in and have a turn. You have no idea what a fine floor there is."

Before Jessie knew it, her arm was drawn through Robin's and they were walking down the road together.

What had happened to the world in the past few minutes? The shadows were full of nightingales and life seemed wonderfully brighter.

"Sit down here," said Robin, when they reached the bridge. "Your name is Jessie, isn't it? Sit down here, Jessie, and tell me all about your troubles. What makes you so unhappy?"

"I suppose it is because I am unhappy most of the time," said Jessie, slowly.

"Your father and mother are both dead?"

"Yes. My father was a doctor, but he died very young, and my mother soon followed him. There wasn't much money, and what there was was lost in a bank failure. I have been an orphan since I was four years old, and I have been in a home ever since I was six till Mrs. Craig came and brought me here to help her with the dairy work."

"You don't look very strong," said Robin, doubtfully.

"I am strong enough," Jessie answered. "But I can't bear to churn, and all those horrid pats of butter make me sick!"

"I am afraid you were not intended to work on a farm," said Robin, smiling.

"I love the country," Jessie replied. "It is so sweet and still, and it is like a picture to see the cows coming through the daisy field. I love this little creek here, and this bridge with the little patches of moss and the ferns growing in the crevices. When I can sit on the steps and watch the white clouds go sailing by over the river and back of the hills, I am quite happy. Have you ever noticed how lovely they are? Just at sunset, back of that little notch there, there is the loveliest cloud-bank full of lights and colors."

Her face was turned so that the moon's rays fell full upon it, and as Robin Shaw looked at her, he was suddenly aware that Jessie had the most beautiful eyes he had ever seen. Her parted lips disclosed a fine set of regular teeth, and a change came over her face which told him that beauty sometimes follows happiness.

"They are playing a cotillon," said Robin, jumping up. "Come, Jessie, I want you to dance with me."

"I am a very poor dancer," she demurred.

But Robin led her through, whispering his hints of what to do next, till she gained confidence enough to enter heartily into the figures.

"Well, upon my word!" said Kitty Craig, as she saw Robin chatting gaily with Jessie.

"Mother," said Father Craig, emphatically. "Jessie ain't such a bad-looking girl after all. If she was only toggled off the rest of 'em, darned if she wouldn't look nice!"

"I always told the child was well enough," said Mother Craig, gently; "but I do hope Robin won't turn her head completely."

What had gotten into Robin Shaw? He stayed with Jessie till supper-time, and waited on her as though she were a princess.

"It is one of his tricks," said Kitty, shrugging her shoulders. "Thank you, Mr. Harding! I would like some mountain cake and a glass of lemonade."

The words were scarcely out of her mouth when a wild scream, followed by shrieks and shouts, brought every one to their feet.

A lantern had caught fire and fallen. As it fell, it struck a beam and glanced off toward the hay-mow. In a minute there was an awful roar of flame, smoke filled the barn in dense clouds, and there was a wild rush for the door.

Who can describe such a scene as that? Girls fainting and were dragged through the flames to the door. Terror and dismay rendered many of the men helpless.

"Heaven's sake," cried Robin Shaw, "get everybody out! Kitty, are you there? Mary Bains! Where's Mrs. Craig?"

Four or five times Robin rushed back into the fire to rescue some one bewildered by the fire or stupefied by smoke.

"Don't go back there, Robin!" Tom Harding shouted to him at last. "Everybody is here. Keep back—it is dangerous!"

"Jessie isn't here," he said. "Poor little thing!"

Once more he burst into that stifling place. The heat was intense, and the hot, thick smoke choked him.

"Jessie!" he shouted with all his force. "This way! Here is the door, Jessie!"

He stumbled across something. In getting up he turned and lost himself. Smoke had shut off the passage.

He turned around, bewildered for a moment, and then, still shouting "Jessie!" he rushed across the barn in the opposite direction from that in which he had entered.

Robin saw instantly his terrible danger. All about him was dense smoke, which blinded his eyes.

When he opened them an instant, he saw only vast sheets of roaring flame about him. A terrible sensation of suffocation came over him. His cry for late one for help, and then he fell.

It was only a moment, though it seemed a century, before he felt himself grasped by the shoulders, and someone said:

"Help yourself all you can! I am not very strong. This way!"

He was powerless, but he felt himself dragged across the floor and then he felt a face as hot as his own, and then he felt a hand as strong as his own, and he was dragged out of a small door into a pile of hay outside, as yet untouched by sparks.

A dozen hands seized him then. Water and fresh air revived him slowly. Someone was cooling his head with ice. "Your face is all blistered," said a soft voice. "I am so sorry!"

"Jessie," he said, holding out his hand. "I am so glad you are safe. Was it you who brought me out?"

She nodded.

"Don't say anything about it," she whispered. "I knew there was another door. I heard you had gone for me, and—and you know the rest."

Robin pressed her hand warmly.

"You are a brave girl," he said, in a low tone.

And Jessie's heart leaped for joy.

The barn burned down, as poor Father Craig said it would, but all hands fell to and helped him build another, so that it was not such a very great loss. By the time the new hay was ready to go in, Father Craig was pretty well fixed.

"Kitty says that was the most unlucky dance ever heard of," said Jessie, as she sat on the old stone bridge at sunset, watching her beloved clouds drift by.

"Not for me," said Robin Shaw, "unless I have made a mistake. Jessie, I saw you first at that dance in the barn, and I have watched you since we have all been at work here building the barn, and Jessie, I do not know any girl in Liddellton I would care to marry except you. I love you very much, Jessie, and I could make you happy if—"

"Robin—oh, Robin!" she cried, bursting into tears.

And then the poor little thing flung herself into his arms in a very abandon of joy.

This is just how it happened, and yet Kitty Craig still thinks that that dance was a most unfortunate affair.

THREW AWAY HIS CRUTCHES

AFTER YEARS OF TERRIBLE SUFFERING.

AN INTERESTING HISTORY.

STATEMENT OF MR. WM. MCNEE.

For eight years I was troubled with a sore on my leg which resulted from having it broken. The doctor kept me in bed five months trying to heal it up, but all to no purpose. I tried all sorts of salves, liniments, ointments, pills and medicines but with no benefit. In 1883 it became so bad that I had to sit on one chair and keep my foot on another for four months. I could not put my foot on the ground or the bed would rush out in a stream and my leg would swell to eleven times its natural size.

ELEVEN RUNNING SORES

developed on it which reduced me to a living skeleton (I lost 70 lbs. in four months). Friends advised me to go to the Hospital; but I would not, for I knew they would take my leg off. The doctor then wanted to split it open and scrape the bone, but I was too weak to stand the operation. One old lady said it had turned to black erysipelas and could never be cured. I had never heard of Burdock Blood Purifiers then, but I read of a minister, Rev. Mr. Stout, who had been cured of a severe abscess on the neck by B.B.P. After medical aid had failed, and I thought I would try it. I washed the leg with the Bitters and took them according to directions. After using one bottle I could walk on crutches, after taking three, I threw away the crutches, took a scribe and went to work in the field. At the end of the sixth bottle my leg was entirely healed up; pieces of bone had worked out of it and the cords came back to their natural places again. That was nine years ago and it has never broken out since. I can walk five miles to-day as fast as anyone, and all this I owe to B. B. P., which certainly saved my leg, if not my life. I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers. Give B. B. P. a trial, it will cure you as it did me.

BRANDON MAIL.

THURSDAY, MAY 11, 1893.

THE HUDSON'S BAY RY.

The Portage Liberal, edited by Joseph Martin's late law partner, abuses the Free Press for standing by the Hudson's Bay Ry. It says, "the F. P. no longer pretends to defend the granting of the enormous aid the province at one time proposed to give." Whether that aid would have been small or enormous, it may not be out of place to say that it was Mr. Martin proposed it—the guaranteeing of 4% interest on $4,500,000 for twenty years. The amount the province would have to pay under such a guarantee would, in any event have been but $180,000 a year for 20 years, and if the road paid pretty well it would be much lighter, and perhaps nothing. But what we want to point out is that if the F. P. is censurable for defending such assistance, how are Mr. Martin, Mr. Greenway and the rest of that faction blameless for proposing it? If that conundrum is too difficult we would ask the Liberal what it thought of Mr. Martin's suggestion, when he desired to climb to fame through Farmers' Union, that it would pay every farmer in Manitoba to mortgage his farm for $100 to build that road?

Every man, but a fool or a Greenway Liberal, knows that the $500 a mile appeared in sight, knows that wheat could be conveyed to England 10c a bushel less than by any other route, and our imports could come in at a corresponding reduction; and though the country has been sunk in a million and a half for competition, and another million is asked for, the C. P. R. is still appealed to to reduce rates. This two and a half millions is doubtless more than the Hudson's Bay Ry. would have cost, under four and a half million guarantee, over a period of twenty years, and now we have a two and a half million debt as good as around our necks, and the cry for competition is as loud as ever.

These gentlemen need not attempt to creep into their holes in this way as the Hudson's Bay project will yet catch them by the nose, no matter where they hide.

EDUCATION.

Dr. Orton, of Winnipeg, had a letter in the Free Press, the other day, dealing with the "over education" of the day, that had many good points, to recommend it. The Doctor thinks Manitoba, and all Canada for that matter, is spending too much on the educational institutions of the day, and though it is the next thing to sacrifice to say it, he is about right. The state owes every youth in the land a good English education, but it should be drawn on for nothing more. All who want higher education should find the means to secure it themselves. Collegiate departments and high schools are established in large villages and small towns, and maintained for the most part by the taxation of the public, for the education, in so far as it is serviceable, of but a limited few. When a high school or collegiate department is established it is attended by scores simply because it is there, and without any intention of turning the education got there to any useful end. It is safe to say that the Brandon, who twenty-five years hence looks back at the career of those pupils that are attending the Brandon Collegiate to-day, will not find more than ten per cent of the number that have made any practical use of the education they are getting there now. Oh! but, says one, that is not the fault of either the school or the education. Very true, but in dealing with matters of this character people must speak of things as they turn out, and not as they might be with circumstances reversed. If a boy or girl has the material in him or her out of which men and women, who turn higher education to account, are made, an education can be got at a good common school sufficient to fit the scholar for a second-class teacher's certificate at the age of 17, and with that education at that age the party has plenty of years before him, or her, in which to secure all the education desired in good time out of personal earnings. In so far as the useful results go, the state and the average tax payer are contributing large sums annually for the education of ten per cent of the attendants at the high schools. To our mind it would be infinitely better, in so far as the general public is concerned, if instead of Collegiate and High schools, maintained by public taxation, more private academies were scattered over the country, where special training is available for those who desire it.

Those who have no calling in view, and are now attending the high schools merely because they are there, would not attend the academies, where they would have to pay for their tuition. In the high schools the pupils have to take up all branches laid down, without classification, whether they attend to make any use of half of them or not, in after life. In the academy, on the other hand the branches desired only would be taken up, and of course greater progress in the special education, in a given time would be the result. As we said at the outset such advocacy, however, is considered sacrilegious the way things go, and we close it.

THE TARIFF AGAIN.

What the Honorables Foster and Bowell can hope to gain by interviewing the Boards of Trade, Importers and Manufacturers of Canada, but more especially the two former, for information to assist them in tariff reform, is something, to be honest, the average mind cannot understand. Of course they have a knowledge of trade questions, and can impress their observations, but that is all. Practically speaking, it matters nothing to an importer whether he pays 10% or 40% on an import, as he puts the duty with profits, on his money invested in duty on the import, and charges all to the consumer—he neither gains nor loses by it. And the same is true of the manufacturers. The present import duties on imports, are designed to be prohibitive, or they are falling in the object for which framed, and when they pay duties on raw materials used in manufacture, they simply add it on the cost of their manufactures and charge all to the consumer. It is then the consumers, and they alone, the government ought to consult, if they desire to make alterations equitably.

The consumers or at least every sensible one of them know that a revenue sufficient to run the country, from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year, must be collected in revenues, and what cannot be got in inland, postal, and from casual and similar sources must be got out of customs—say $15,000,000. Now this must be got from consumers, and the proper principle is to make all pay according to means, and not according to class or profession. It is because they are made an exception to this principle that the farmers of Canada are objecting, perfectly justified in objecting, to the tariff on implements, wire and twine. They pay their share of the revenues, with all other classes of the community, on the general imports of the country, and they are compelled to pay over and above this, special duties on the articles enumerated above, which no other class of the community are compelled to pay, that they object and deserve the sympathy of all honest men in their objections.

We have just said that if importers in any other classes of merchandise imported pay duties, they in turn add the expenses on the prices otherwise of their wares, and collect from the consumers. If the farmers could add the duties they pay on implements, twine and wire, to the price of their wheat, and make the consumers pay it they would stand as other importers stand, and have no special cause for complaint, but this they can not do. They have a surplus to export, which very few in any other callings in Canada have, and they to sell in markets where other countries stand in keen competition. They have then to take, not the price they should get, considering the cost of production, because of duties and other restrictions, but the price paid to other competitors, less handicapped than they are. The farmer then is the only class of producer in Canada, who cannot add the cost of duties to the price of his productions, and compel the consumers to pay it, and for that reason then he is in reality the first man, who should be consulted in a tariff revision, and the only one whose story should have special weight with the government.

The farmers of the Canadian Northwest have asked for a removal of duties on coal oil and lumber, but they have not the same grounds in insisting on this as on the abolition of implement duties, for the reason all classes in Canada consume lumber and coal oil as well as they do in this respect they are not specially legislated against. They, however, feel that they are at a disadvantage because of the heavy freights they pay on all exports and imports as compared with the farmers in other provinces, and for this they should have some consideration. Besides this they contend, and very justly, as there is no longer any possibility, because of the scarcity of timber in the states, of American lumber being sacrificed in Canada. Duties then enable Canadian producers to make only the more profits out of their victims, over the Canadian producers. As to the coal oil question the case stands thus: There are but a few people in Lambton county, Ont., engaged in the industry, and the extra tax on the whole of Canada, is not justified by the small amount of money expended in the industry.

The cry of keep your money at home and support your industries, does not amount to much, as the more the prohibitive (D) tariff is tested against implements in the Northwest, the greater is the importation. Within the last three years our importation has trebled, so that protection is not protecting. If the Canadian made as suitable an article at the same price the American farmer pays it would be unfair for the Canadian to send his money out of the country, and if that was the case we are confident that he knows enough about dollars and cents to dissuade him from doing it. It is because he cannot be as well suited at home for the price, the American farmer pays, that he imports.

We are aware there are a few people, who will blame us for reasoning this way, but if there is a man in Canada now, who can say either premises or conclusions are wrong, from the minister of the crown to the simplest farmer, we want to hear from him. This is surely fair.

THE GLOBE AND THE TARIFF.

What the Toronto Globe can mean by dealing with the tariff question the way it does, is something no sane man can understand. It takes up the working man and tells him if the tariff on clothing and provisions was removed, he could live so much cheaper. It tells the farmer if the duties were removed he would get his implements and all other requirements 50 per cent cheaper. It tells the professional men and the manufacturer if duties were removed they could present their products so much cheaper and so on of all classes. Now, the question is this: If all this be true, why did the Globe advise its friends whom in power in 1870 to raise the tariff from 15 to 17 1/2 per cent? If Canada can do without a revenue now, when the debt is much larger in consequence of the construction of the C. P. R. and the enlargement of the Canada, than it was then, it could surely have done without one when the Grigs were in power and the demands on the treasury were less than they are now.

Again, notwithstanding that increase to 17 1/2 per cent, the Grig government of that day was unable to meet the current expenses out of the 17 1/2 per cent tariff, and ran behind in the five years over eleven millions of dollars. Had the faithful remained in power the 17 1/2 would have to be further increased to meet ordinary demands.

What The Mail contends is that a tariff equitably borne by all classes, sufficient to meet the necessary expenses of the country, must be enforced, but special levies to the prejudice of one class for the benefit of another must be discontinued. In some cases it may be wise to experiment in protection but when after a fair trial it is found a reasonable protection does not protect, or is not necessary for the continuance of the business originally protected it should either be sensibly diminished altogether.

The Free Press has a telegram to the effect that the English share holders of the G. N. W. C. R. R. are now in the ascendant and are bringing suit to compel Mr. Codd to give up the books and all the belongings of the company. It may be that the Canadian board have been harshly treated; but of course this is a feature of the case that will not interest the public. The latter want to see the road running no matter by whom, and are not concerned in the course of legislation there after. The new board say they will push construction vigorously this summer.

The difference between the Ontario and the Manitoba governments, both professing "Liberal" on the liquor question, is now fully before the public. Mr. Greenway asked for a vote of the people, and he got it in effect that Manitoba wanted total prohibition, and his next step was to ask the Ottawa Government to grant it. In Ontario the Mowat Government has declared it will ask for a plebiscite, and if the people are in favor of prohibition, they will ask the court of last resort what their power is in the matter. This is the difference between the two Liberal governments; but then as Kenneth McKenzie said in the Local House, Mr. Mowat is not a Liberal, he is only a shyster.

Consumption and Lung Difficulties.

Always arise from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air-cells, by impure blood. Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter, and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring with it and leave throughout the body the elements of health and strength. As the river, leaving the elements of fertility in its course, causes the barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood causes the frame to rejoice in strength and health, and bloom with unfolding beauty. All Medicine Dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

To Evangelize World's Fair.

New York, May 4.—An English lord with a mission to evangelize the World's Fair, is here. Monday a meeting was held by the Y. M. C. A. of Brooklyn in his honor. He is Lord Bennett, a son of the Earl of Tankerville, and with him Major D. W. Whittle and Miss Whittle. Lord Bennett, together with Major Whittle and his daughter, have been engaged in evangelical work abroad. They arrived on Saturday night on the Canadiana. Lord Bennett and Major and Miss Whittle are going to Chicago in a few days to carry on, in connection with Mr. Moody, a series of evangelical meetings at the World's Fair. They are in the meantime the guests of General Howard.

At the international boat race held at New York, Saturday last, at which picked crews from all the foreign men-of-war competed, the British tars won two out of the three races and finished up well in the third. It was a great day for Great Britain.

HOMES AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

There is no reason why anyone should be deterred from visiting the World's Fair by reason of possible inconvenience and uncertainty attending the securing of satisfactory hotel accommodations.

The Northern Pacific Railroad will in due time publish low excursion rates to Chicago and return for this occasion, while its double daily passenger train service, including through sleeping cars of both classes (Standard and Tourist) to Chicago, will as usual be at the head of the list in every particular. To help you in fixing in advance upon your place of residence while attending the World's Fair, we have placed in the hands of our agent at your station a book compiled by perfectly trustworthy parties, called "Homes for Visitors to the World's Fair." This little book, which you can purchase for fifty cents, contains a list of about 9,000 private families who will accommodate visitors in Chicago during the time of the Fair, viz.: May 1st to October 31st; gives their names and addresses, and number of rooms each will have to spare. The book also gives a list of the hotels and their locations; has twelve full-page large-scale maps, and each representing a section of the city, so that with this information before him the intending visitor himself can, at leisure, select the quarter of the city in which he would prefer to stop, corresponding in advance with one or more families in that locality with regard to rates and the accommodations desired.

On May 1, this morning, after 11 o'clock a most daring robbery was perpetrated at Pettit's grocery, King street. In full view of passers-by, and right in the busiest part of the city, a sneak thief entered the store and stole the boy in charge, where the boy was.

The boy replied that Mr. Pettit had gone to dinner. Then he asked if they kept barrels for sale. The boy said yes, and went down in the cellar, leaving a note in the store, but his vision. Then the robber got down to business. He touched the till, securing $50. He proceeded to the safe, he opened the door and took out a bag of money, and secured all the money, $55 in bills. When the boy came up, he suspected something, and went to the establishment and called for Mr. Pettit. The police were notified, and a search was made on the boy's person, and will endeavor to locate him before he leaves the city. The thief was a perfect specimen of a clean-shaven, thick-set man, about 5 feet 9 inches, and wore a black shirt and black clothes.

The full court gave a judgment the other day that is of importance to the public. Some four years ago, the Ontario bank got a judgment against the town of Portage, for $3,530. At the time Mr. Arthur, Boyle and Campbell were the agents of the town, and they agreed to pay the draft of the town for that amount, in favor of the Ontario Bank, they to get the debentures of the town for that amount. The draft was made, and accepted by Mr. Arthur, Boyle and Campbell, but they refused to pay it, as they did not get the debentures as agreed on. In time the Ontario Bank sued Mr. Arthur, Boyle and Campbell, and got judgment and finally their money.

Mr. Arthur, Boyle and Campbell then sued the Portage, and the Portage denied liability, on the ground the draft had not been authorized by the ratemakers, but by the council only, no by-law had been passed authorizing such debentures as were promised. The action, Justice Killam awarded judgment in favor of plain-tiff. Justice Bain remarking that, as no by-law had been passed by the ratemakers authorizing the draft, the town was not liable. If he ruled otherwise it would be a precedent to allow councils to do business as they pleased, most recklessly, if they desired. The town of Portage gets out of $3,530 in a contemptible way, but it explains the law all the same.

Don't Insure Your Life

or pay any more renewals until you are sure you understand the fundamental principles of Life Insurance. Cash dividends and bonuses are big sounding phrases, but the money they represent was in the first place taken from the policy holder for that very purpose and not for Life Insurance. The true principle of Life Insurance is to get all the insurance you can for the least possible outlay consistent with absolute security.

The Mutual Reserve Fund Association offers absolute security, and the rates are only half the amount charged by old life companies. The assets in proportion to liabilities are nearly double that of the largest level line companies. See parliamentary returns or consult Tommy as an Investment.

Tommy at the bar—'Papa, is this the finest team in town?'

Tommy's Father—'No, but there isn't any finer. Those horses, my boy, cost me $800. They're a perfect match, high spirited, good travellers, and come of a famous ancestry.'

'That's why you've got such a nice barn for them, isn't it?'

'Yes, partly. A pair of fine horses, my son, must be considered as an investment, and a good business man always takes care of his investments.'

'And that's why you watch 'em so much and drive on the boulevards with 'em, and keep 'em looking so slick, isn't it?'

'Yes, that's on the same principle. A careful man is bound to look well after his investments and see that they are always in good shape.'

'(After some cogitation) 'You don't consider me much of an investment, do you, papa?'

How She Got There.

A very pretty girl stepped into a crowded car on the College Avenue line. She belonged in the high school, and wasn't in the habit of standing up.

The car was full, but everybody else had a seat. Seven men held down the most available ones, and strange to relate, not one of them appeared to be aware that a young woman was compelled to stand.

The pretty girl, with a quick glance, discerned at once the cause of the situation and blushed somewhat indignantly. She had a long distance to ride, and couldn't cling gracefully to a strap.

Two squares had been travelled when an idea took possession of her classical mind. Out came the handkerchief and she began to dab delicately at her eyes. The little hands fumbled among a few silver coins. A nickel dropped to the floor and rolled to the far end of the car. This is part of the plan, but it is executed dexterously, and the passengers only look on with surprise.

The five-cent piece was tendered by a man who assumed her place at the stop. She thanked him and looked at innocence—Indianapolis Journal.

Got it on the Wrong Log.

There is a time to keep silent, but it was evidently not the right time in the case of a boy mentioned, who lives in an Ontario town. He got a silver in his foot and, in spite of his protestations, his mother decided to place a police officer on his wound.

The boy, vigorously resisting, declared: 'I won't have no police,' he declared stoutly.

'Yes you will, Eddie,' declared both mother and grandmother, firmly; and, the majority being two to one, at bedtime the police was ready.

If the police was ready the boy was not, and he proved so refractory that a switch was brought into requisition. It was arranged that the grandmother should apply the switch, while the mother was to stand with the upraised switch at the bedside. The boy was told that if he 'opened his mouth' he would receive that which would keep him quiet.

As the hot switch touched the boy's foot he opened his mouth.

'You've got it on the wrong log,' said his mother, shaking her stick, while the grandmother busily applied the switch.

Once more the little fellow opened his mouth.

'I—'

But the upraised switch averted him into silence.

In a minute more the police was firmly in place, and the little boy was tucked in bed.

'There, now,' said his mother, 'the old silver will be drawn out and Eddie's foot will be all well.'

As the mother and grandmother moved triumphantly away a shrill, small voice came from under the bedclothes.

'You've got it on the wrong log!'

The Price of Land in London.

Recently a freehold property in London facing the bank of England was put up to auction, but was bought in for £170,000 or about £45 per square foot, say $152 per square foot. The owner, who is a member of the House of Commons, has made important investments in the city of London. This would be more than 50 per cent. higher than the above.

Romance.

This world has a good deal of romance, and romance is the silver lining to the cloud of hard materialism, of which life is largely composed; and the romantic is not confined to the narrow region occupied by poets and painters, but is met in the wood-shop, in the harvest field and in the woodland, and men are all the better for meeting it.

Wedding Breakfast Invitations.

A stand-up wedding breakfast is now much more fashionable than the former formal feast, because it allows one to invite a greater number of guests. Invitations should be sent out a fortnight before the wedding day.

The newest invitation cards are now nearly all printed in gold instead of silver, but sometimes there is a mixture of both styles. The folded cards with the initials of the bride and groom printed in gold on either side, with the invitation in silver underneath, are ancient.

The groom should provide bouquets for brides and brides, and the latest in 'bridesmaid' presents are brooches or lace pins in the form of a slipper, or true lover's knot. To give a brooch with the year in which the marriage takes place, outlined in diamonds or pearls, is considered chic.

'Do you think it will fade?' she asked anxiously, as she chewed a mouthful of the goods.

'No, I'm sure you won't.'

'Nor shrink in the washing?'

'No, these are linen threads.'

'How wide did you say it was?'

'Forty-two inches, ma'am.'

'That isn't extra wide?'

'It isn't made any wider.'

'Are you sure it will wear well?'

'Certainly, ma'am—like cast iron.'

'And won't fade or shrink?'

'Not the least bit, ma'am.'

'Do you change goods in this store?'

'Not after they are cut, ma'am.'

'Then I won't trade here! I won't patronize a store where they're not more accommodating,' and she walked away, leaving the clerk a wreck behind her.
